

Kev's Guide to - End Of Lease Flea Treatment

Are you a tenant and moving out of your current rental and need to get your pet bond back?

The tenant is responsible for having a pest treatment at the end of their lease where the tenants have allowed animals on the premises. Even if the animals have only been kept outside or have only been on the property for a short stay you are required to complete a Pest Control treatment.

The end of lease pest fumigation is the last thing you do before you hand the keys back to your property manager.

What needs to be done before treatment

The carpets should already have been cleaned.

The house should have been emptied of all your belongings and the cleaning finished.

What we do

All done to real estate standards.

Internal cracks and crevice treatment and treat all carpeted areas, also a minimum of 1 metre around the outside of the home needs to be sprayed. We go the extra mile and also spray any sandy areas in the backyard, because this is where fleas can live for up to 4 months waiting for their next meal.

We offer our end of lease clients a simpler option at the same price. Once booked in, we email you a quote, all we need is proof of payment and the keys left at the residence (Meter box, Letter box) we do the treatment and place the keys and receipt back where the keys were left. We will send you a text to let you know all is completed.

This way you don't have to take time of work or have the kids getting bored while waiting for the treatment to be done.

Approx. Cost $200
